

CPYRGHT

FOIAb3b

Charles V. Broadley, 58, Senior CIA Security Aide

Charles Vincent Broadley, 58, a senior security official of the Central Intelligence Agency, died yesterday at Suburban hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Broadley was born in Salem, Mass., and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1925. He was placed on inactive status in 1927 and worked as an engineer for the American Steel Foundries Corp., Metropolitan Life and the Fidelity Casualty Insurance Co. until recalled to active duty in 1942.

During the war he served with the Office of Naval Intelligence and in 1947 joined the CIA.

Mr. Broadley, who has lived in Washington since 1941, leaves his wife, Margaret, of the home address, 5442 Broad Branch road N.W., and two daughters, Mrs. Deborah Gale of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Barbara Beinhocker of Cambridge, Mass.

He also leaves two brothers and a sister, George Harold Broadley of Baltimore, Frank J. Broadley and Miss Edith Mary Broadley, both of Boston.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the North Fort

CHARLES V. BROADLEY

Myer Chapel, with burial in Arlington cemetery. Friends may call at Pumphrey's funeral home, Bethesda, after 9 a.m. tomorrow and Monday.

The family requests that expressions of sympathy be in the form of donations to the Public Service Aid Society, 10 Sixteenth street N.W.